

Anita Friedt is an independent consultant focused on mentoring the next generation of arms control and strategic security experts. She enjoyed a lengthy career at the Department of State as an arms control, security and nonproliferation expert. She began her career during President Reagan's Administration. Career highlights include: advisor to Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs Walter Stoessel; Soviet and then Russia foreign policy analyst in the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research; political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow from 1989-1992 and again from 1997-1999; National Security staff director for the successful negotiation and ratification of the New START Treaty, and Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for the Arms Control, Verification and Disarmament Bureau. Ms. Friedt earned a B.A. in German and Political Science from James Madison University, and an M.A. from Georgetown University. She is proficient in German and Russian.